

Mapping the supranational higher education space

00:39:33 Janja Komljenovic: Please feel free to ask questions or post comments.

00:45:49 Janja Komljenovic: You may only indicate that you would like to ask a question or comment after the presentations. I will give you the floor.

00:52:14 Abdul Hai Sofizada: Just a comment: No external aid by international development organisations can be impactful if some of these key imperatives are not embedded in the scope and design of the programmes particularly in low-income countries, a) focus on national priorities, b) development impact, c) system-building, and d) sustainability (beyond the programme end).

00:52:23 Victoria: How to develop the supranational higher education policy for the unpredictable future?

00:54:28 Diana Laurillard: I think you are tracking the flows of atoms, not electrons, i.e. students who travel, not students who are studying online. UNESCO is a key actor. Reports from universities in Asia and Africa, funded by UNESCO, are looking at increasing their digital teaching capabilities. What stands out is the willingness of teachers to collaborate to innovate, given the focus on more online learning. Would your project look at these types of flows, which will certainly expand?

00:59:20 Victoria: Congratulations! Thank you!

01:01:20 Doria Abdullah: comment - might be of interest to the team: https://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/abs/10.1111/ejed.12462 (ASEM)

01:03:51 Abdul Hai Sofizada: Fully agree on the grassroots level cooperation.

01:05:27 CGHE Annual Conference: Thank you for joining this session. The next session will be 'PANEL – The future of international student mobility'. You can join it at 11.50am (UK) via the conference website: https://www.cgheconference2022.com/

01:07:03 Angela Tavares de Jesus: Timor-Leste

01:12:48 Nina Kruglikova: Thanks so much!

01:12:54 cristina: Congratulations all! Wonderful presentations and research!

01:12:57 Sue: Thank you!

01:12:59 Ruwayshid Alruwaili: thank you

01:13:08 Penny Welch: Thank you for this important session

01:13:08 Ying Yang: thank you!