

Pull factors in choosing a higher education study abroad destination after the massive global immobility: A re-examination from Chinese perspectives

11 May 2023

- 00:18:46 Mariza Tulio: Good morning from Brazil!
- 00:19:11 Ka Ho Mok: welcome all for joining us from different parts of the globe
- 00:20:03 Mariza Tulio: Reacted to "welcome all for join..." with 🙏
- 00:35:20 Dave Amor: Very interesting. Tuition top "even" for Chinese students and parents.
- 00:37:03 Ka Ho Mok: financial constraints emerge during the COVID crisis era as domestic / regional / global economies became worse, which should have affected the financial capacity of parents for supporting kids to study abroad
- 00:37:10 Monika Jaiswal-Oliver: Replying to "Very interesting. Tu..."

World Ranking is not that high in interesting.

- 00:44:34 Simon Marginson: It's time to start thinking about your questions and statements in response to Lucy's great data - post you thoughts in the Chat and we can bring you into Q&A!
- 00:48:59 Simon Marginson: Questions please!
- 00:49:19 Ellen Wang: I have a question please.
- 00:49:33 Vincenzo Raimo: Historically, more than 50% of all new Chinese student entrants to UG study to UK HEIs were admitted with advanced standing ie directly to yr 2 or 3 and therefore are likely to have come through articulation agreements through joint programmes, joint colleges and joint universities. Through the Covid period UK and Chinese universities showed that they could continue to collaborate and support students to completion without the previously required mobility. (i) Now that regulations in China require joint programmes to give students the opportunity to complete the foreign degree in China without the need for travel will fewer Chinese students chose to complete their UK degree fully in China without traveling for a year or more to the UK? and (ii) will joint programmes & joint colleges with Chinese partners become less attractive to UK universities motivated by the financial benefits gained primarily through students transferring to the UK?

Also, very interested that affordability is the top factor for both students and parents in your research for international mobility. So maybe joint programmes which reduce the overall cost of study abroad because the study period abroad is reduced will become more attractive and more students will use these routes to overseas study?

What do you think?

00:50:03 Ellen Wang: As we know, China is a country with rich regional sub cultures. So I am interested in your sample collection as to where are these students and parents from.

00:50:48 Kate Jennings: Sorry if I missed this, is the data for full-degree study only or does it include short-term (non-degree) study abroad as well?

00:51:10 Ellen Wang: Because their mindset might be very different from one region to another. Therefore the output of the survey for decision making may be very different.

00:55:26 Juan Li: Thanks for sharing!

00:56:15 Christina巧玲肖: I also agree that safety is at a very important place

00:57:27 Monika Jaiswal-Oliver: Yes safety is the number one question of concern, especially my institution is in Chicago.

01:06:21 CGHE Webinars: Thank you for joining us today. A recording of this session will be posted on the CGHE site: <https://researchcghe.org/events/cghe-seminar/pull-factors-in-choosing-a-higher-education-study-abroad-destination-after-the-massive-global-immobility-a-re-examination-from-chinese-perspectives/>

01:06:22 Simon Marginson: we'll have time for one more question - please come forward!

01:06:52 CGHE Webinars: Our next webinar, 'International Student Engagement and Support', will take place on Tuesday from 2pm (UK). You can register here: <https://researchcghe.org/events/cghe-seminar/international-student-engagement-and-support/>

01:07:23 Christina巧玲肖: Thank you

01:10:31 Vincenzo Raimo: Thank you so much for a really interesting (and I think timely esp for those of us in the UK) presentation and for discussion

01:10:41 Agata Lambrechts: thank you very much for another great seminar! best wishes

01:11:38 Kate Jennings: Thank you for this very informative webinar. I am sure folks are aware of the Navitas Insights surveys. It is interesting to compare these findings to the recent findings from Navitas agent perception survey not only for China but also for other countries globally. <https://insights.navitas.com/how-regional-variations-play-out-for-international-students-deciding-on-where-to-study/>

01:12:38 Jorge Enrique Delgado, UPitt/CIES: Thanks for another great webinar!

01:12:51 Ellen Wang: Thank you so much for the fantastic webinar!

01:13:23 Dave Amor: Interesting contrast with the Navitas data. I'd suspect that is a fundamental difference not only in respondents, but also in the type of student that ends up going to an agent. Might explain some difference.

01:13:31 Juergen Henze: Thanks so much for your contribution here! Prof. Mom it is long time since we met in HK - great memories!

01:13:37 Kate Jennings: Reacted to "Interesting contrast..." with

01:13:44 Alexandra Bagi: thank you so much for this webinar, it really fits my research. Very interesting ! :)
