

The New Geopolitics of International Higher Education (Part II), 27 January 2022

00:52:04 Simon Marginson: It's time to think about the questions and statements you might want to bring forward to our speakers in the Q&A. Use the chat to do this - from there we'll select participants in the discussion. Come forward now!

00:57:31 claire callender: It would be interesting to hear Jee's observations about Syria

00:58:50 Jane Gatewood: I'm curious about the speakers' views on China, both as an authoritarian site and as the originator of global rankings

01:01:59 Ronald Barnett: Is there a tension between these presentations, between (1) raising critical questions about Western liberalism on the one hand (in postcolonial perspective) and (2) valuing Western liberalism (amid over-tight State steering) on the other hand? Just what are we to think about Western liberalism?!

01:04:49 Melis Cin: The concept authoritarianism draws on Islamic populism and neoliberal authoritarianism in Turkey as opposed to what we see in Hungary and Poland – how do you see this challenging the democratic governance in HE landscape of turkey?

01:09:11 Elizabeth Buckner: Lakshmi and Jee - great presentation! I'm following up on Ronald Barnett's question above - doesn't BU's status as 'internationalized' / internationally connected university and its history as an American college (which maps onto colonial influence) also position it much better than any other university in Turkey to make appeals to the world? Even just its Twitter presence in English distinguishes it from many others- Turan's idea of island of freedom relates it to history of fighting for pluralism and urban/cosmopolitanism, but it's elite status also matters. In fact - what we are wondering is does its appeal to the world divide it / cut it off a bit from other Turkish academics

01:09:40 CGHE Webinars: Thank you for joining us today. A recording of this webinar will be available via the CGHE site tomorrow: <https://www.researchcghe.org/events/cghe-seminar/the-new-geopolitics-of-international-higher-education-part-ii/>

01:10:04 Trif Victorița: Thank you!

01:10:33 CGHE Webinars: Our next webinar, 'Students as global citizens', will be on Tuesday. You can register here: <https://www.researchcghe.org/events/cghe-seminar/students-as-global-citizens/>

01:11:56 CRISTINA DE CARVALHO: Congratulations Carolina, Jee and Lakshmi. Wonderful and relevant presentations. I agree with Carolina, Scielo is really important for Latin American Universities.

01:17:11 Lori Lee Wallace: Thank you!

01:17:35 Jane Gatewood: Thanks, everyone! Really interesting talks

01:18:01 Dan: Thanks for sharing, quite interesting research 🌹

01:18:10 Anoud Abusalim: Thank you for the interesting talks.

01:18:26 yaqiao liu: thank you! 😊

01:18:37 Monika Jaiswal-Oliver: Thank you all

01:18:37 Melis Cin: bakalim paperlari nasil olcak, size ya da bana gelir kesin review icin, gorusmek uzere,

01:19:37 Maria Vlachou: Thank you!